Intimacy is electric. It is a compelling force that drives us to satisfy a longing within, just like the sex drive. Our intimacy need is a drive for deep love, comfort, gratification, and to feel emotionally safe. In this book, pure intimacy with God and with our life partner is described as achievable. True intimacy paves the path to lasting devotion, connection, and love. It is the essence of close interpersonal friendship. However, intimacy is more than closeness and it is certainly not sex. As recorded in the pages of this text, lasting intimacy is achieved by honesty, transparency and the opening of one's self to another. Sacred intimacy is holy intimacy, nothing hidden.

I have tried to make the point that love is a triangle or a trinity. There is a parallel construction between your relationship with God and with your marital spouse. Both relationships are born and grow through intimacy (honesty, transparency and openness). As we immerse ourselves and connect with God in love, we are transformed in how we connect with and love others.

In the story and experience of The Four Naked Women there were psychological and spiritual phenomenon of artificial intimacy at play on the mind. The images I saw depicted the satanic strategy to compromise my morals and the holy intimacy with my spouse and with God.

We all have the choice of choosing to resist the temptation of artificial intimacy.

Although sexual things may be a temptation, we can overcome these temptations with the power of the Spirit of Christ and his name as we fully embrace Him.

The strength of the sex drive is only outmatched by the quest for survival and for food. However, when we are connected to the Lord Jesus Christ by heart and soul and resist temptation in His name, it evaporates.

Each time we resist the satanic strategy, we become stronger. Therefore, it is possible to overcome sexual temptation, lust, and habitual vices that bring personal defeat. While our vulnerability may be rooted in past traumatic experiences and the practice of moral compromise, we can overcome temptation.

The path of sacred intimacy is a loving one, it is a graceful one and it is built upon heart level trust. At the heart of intimacy is the giving and receiving of affection and adoration. The question is who do you adore? I invite you to come closer to the One who created you and adores you.
